advocacy

ASBA has created a toolkit of resources to help school districts celebrate parents choosing local public schools as their educational choice during this year's National School Choice Week (January 25-31, 2015). When it comes to education, parents in Arizona have more choices than parents in almost any other state.

More than eight out of ten families in Arizona continue to choose local public schools. School districts around the state are encouraged to utilize these resources as a way to thank their parent communities and communicate all the great programs, achievements and opportunities local public schools provide.
